Regional Community Briefings on HIV/AIDS

A Report From

The Office of National AIDS Policy

December 1996
Dear Friends:

Following the historic White House Conference on HIV and AIDS, the Office of National AIDS Policy and the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS decided to conduct a series of regional AIDS policy briefings in locations around the country. These briefings were designed to update concerned community members on the progress we were making in Washington on national issues related to the epidemic. They were designed to allow government officials to hear directly from people around the country about their concerns, their questions, and their ideas.

In four months, we visited 12 U.S. cities in eight states, held 17 public "town hall" briefings, visited 39 AIDS service organizations, and met with numerous newspaper editorial boards. In total, nearly 4,000 people participated, providing us with vital information, feedback, and suggestions.

Such an undertaking would not have been possible without strong partnerships with organizations that serve on the front lines of the HIV/AIDS epidemic. The National AIDS Fund and Funders Concerned About AIDS were the chief sponsors of this venture, providing important advice and support. The Council of Fashion Designers of America and the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation offered crucial support as well.

These briefings provided essential information that has guided AIDS policy decisions at the national level. They helped to shape decisions on such issues as funding for AIDS drug assistance, support for youth peer counseling programs, changes in Social Security disability eligibility procedures, support for housing programs for people with AIDS, and a host of other concerns.

The briefings also served to shine a spotlight on the many excellent AIDS organizations, foundations, and partnerships that are serving local communities. Federal officials, state and local government officials, members of the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS, and other local citizens were able to see, first-hand, the remarkable work that is performed every day. The relationships that were formed during these visits will continue to enrich all participants in the future.

The following report attempts to give you a flavor of these meetings. It is also designed as a testament to the important work being done in communities across this country to improve and protect the lives of our fellow citizens.

Sincerely,

Patricia S. Fleming
Director
Office of National AIDS Policy
Chapter I

On December 6, 1995, President Clinton convened the first-ever White House Conference on HIV and AIDS. More than 300 individuals participated in the conference along with senior members of the Clinton Administration and representatives of more than a dozen Federal agencies involved in the national response to HIV/AIDS.

This historic meeting provided an opportunity for a national dialogue between those who are directly and indirectly affected by the epidemic of HIV/AIDS, those who care for them, and those who advocate on their behalf. This exchange of ideas and information has helped to guide Federal policy decisions.

During the course of the White House Conference, it became clear that an ongoing dialogue is needed to continue the collaboration and cooperation of that day.

Meeting the next day, the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS asked the Clinton Administration to "initiate and maintain regular face-to-face meetings with HIV service providers, people living with HIV/AIDS, and their advocates to ensure consistent and ongoing communication and partnership with community members on the front lines of the AIDS epidemic."

In January 1996, the Office of National AIDS Policy (ONAP) joined with the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS (PACHA), the National AIDS Fund (NAF), and Funders Concerned About AIDS (FCAA) to initiate a series of Regional community briefings on HIV/AIDS policy developments that would provide an opportunity for face-to-face meetings. The objectives of these meetings were:

1. To update affected communities on policy development at the national level and hear directly from them about their concerns and ideas;

2. To provide Federal officials with an opportunity to observe, first-hand, the work of community-based AIDS service organizations (ASOs);

3. To provide community-based ASOs an opportunity to discuss concerns and ideas with Federal officials involved in the national response to HIV/AIDS;

4. To meet with media representatives to help focus local coverage of the impact of the epidemic on local communities; and,

5. To encourage greater participation in local activities by corporate and foundation leaders in those communities.

The public-private partnership that helped create this series of briefings was also essential to their success. Community partners of the National AIDS Fund and Board Members of Funders Concerned About AIDS provided important assistance in identifying local AIDS programs and concerns and in reaching out to the affected community to ensure participation.

Senior Clinton Administration officials, including Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry R. Cisneros, committed their agencies to full participation in this project.

Representatives of the National Institutes of Health, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Health Resources and Services Administration, Office of HIV/AIDS Housing at HUD, and HHS regional offices participated in all of the visits.

Each briefing featured the following elements:

- Meetings with local leaders from the corporate and foundation communities;
- Visits to several AIDS service organizations, including programs that provide care, prevent the transmission of MV, conduct community-based research, provide housing assistance, and deliver substance abuse treatment and prevention;
- Meetings with local media representatives, including editorial boards; and,
- Open, public briefings for ASOs, members of affected communities, and the general public.

The schedule of visits was as follows:

- February 15-16: Dallas and Ft. Worth, Texas
- May 21-25: San Diego and San Francisco, California.
- July 23: Cleveland, Ohio
- July 30-31 Los Angeles, California.
- August 6-7: Charlotte, North Carolina.

Chapter II

In total, these regional briefings included visits to 39 community-based AIDS service organizations, eight meetings with local corporate and foundation funders, five meetings with editorial boards, and nine public briefings.

An estimated 2,000 individuals attended and participated in the public briefings and another 1,000 participated in meetings arranged during site visits.

There was a very strong level of local interest in a continuing dialogue with Federal officials, members of the Advisory Council, and local funders.

Based on these visits, several clear points emerged:

- Communities clearly appreciate the infusion of additional resources to the Ryan White CARE Act. There has been an increase in the number of programs being supported and in the types of services offered to communities;

- Communities are very supportive of programs like the Ryan White CARE-Act, Housing Opportunities for People with AIDS, and AIDS prevention programs.

- Ryan White CARE, Act planning councils and CDC AIDS prevention planning groups are giving community members a seat at the table and a voice in the decisions that affect them; and,

- Medicaid remains a vital source of medical care for people living with HIV/AIDS and the Ryan White CARE Act is also a growing source of such care.

Among the several themes and messages consistently communicated by community members there was:

- A growing concern about the cost and availability of emerging treatments for HIV disease.

The slow pace of some states in adding protease inhibitors to their AIDS Drug Assistance Program (ADAP) formularies caused considerable concern in affected communities;

- A strong desire for greater funding for HOPWA. Communities and ASOs are being very enterprising in their use of HOPWA funds, supporting the creation and renovation of AIDS-specific housing, providing rent support, paying for nutrition services, and providing end-stage care in non-institutional settings. The demand for these services is growing and funding is not yet keeping pace;

- A growing concern about the impact of substance abuse on communities and on the spread of HIV. Many of the communities we visited are operating syringe exchange programs or are considering such programs. There is strong desire for the provision of Federal funds for such programs;

- A clear need by minority-based ASOs for greater resources and technical assistance to cope with a rising demand for their services;

- A continuing set of problems related to obtaining Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits, especially among women of color; and,

- A shortage of care and prevention services targeted to adolescents, particularly young men who have sex with men, and women, especially women of color.

Follow-Up

The Office of National AIDS Policy and relevant Federal agencies are committed to following up on issues raised at these regional community briefings.

Community participants raised a range of issues that include problems with state and local governments to specific problems with Federal agencies, to more general policy issues and concerns.

In many cases, there was immediate follow-up by relevant agencies with the involved ASOs. In others, there was follow-up with relevant state and local agencies in which Federal officials served as a conduit of information.

Finally, Federal policy has clearly been influenced by the testimony heard at town meetings and other venues.

Some examples of that influence are:

- Testimony in Dallas, Miami, and New York regarding the cost and inaccessibility of AIDS drugs led to the President's decision to request additional emergency funding for the AIDS Drug Assistance Program (ADAP) in Fiscal Year 1996 and in FY 1997;

- Testimony in San Francisco, Los Angeles, and several other cities regarding the growing need for HOPWA funding led HUD Secretary Cisneros to request a amendment for FY 1997;

- Testimony in Newark regarding problems being experienced by grandparents who are caring for their grandchildren who are affected or infected by HIV led to the creation of the "Grandparents' Project," which is designing a package of proposals to address those concerns;

- Testimony in many cities regarding ongoing problems with eligibility for SSI and SSDI benefits led ONAP to convene a meeting with officials of the Social Security Administration and client representatives from those cities to identify problems and solutions;

- Federal officials assisted the Minority AIDS Task Force on AIDS in Harlem in obtaining a much-needed approval from a local community board to construct a new housing facility for families affected by HIV/AIDS;
• The Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) dispatched a regional official to the Center for Haitian Studies in Miami to assist that ASO in correcting billing problems that were resulting in delays in payment of Ryan White CARE Act funds; and,

• Issues raised by officials at the Los Angeles County Medical Center were brought to the attention of the Health Care Financing Administration, which included specific assistance for AIDS clinics in Los Angeles in the county's Medicaid waiver plan.

Highlights

The Dallas community has a strong partnership involving ASOs, local foundations and corporations, and private givers. AIDS Services of Dallas, which operates housing programs for individuals and families affected by AIDS, has particularly strong ties to local businesses and givers.

This partnership is not as strong in minority-based organizations, which are coping with a rising demand for services and a shortage of funds.

Welcome House, which provides substance abuse treatment, HIV prevention, and housing services to African-Americans living with HIV and recovering from substance abuse, provides a remarkable range of services to its clients. Welcome House's record has made it a model for other new minority-based ASOs.

Project HELP in Fort Worth has very strong connections to parents and students in that community. It provides AIDS education to adolescents based upon a peer counseling model. It, too, has achieved remarkable results on a very tight budget. The visit to Project Help received extensive local media coverage for the excellent work being done by its staff and volunteers.

Participants at the regional briefing were quite concerned about the rising cost of AIDS care, especially the prices of new drugs recently approved by the FDA. There was also concern expressed about limitations on AIDS education curricula in area schools.

ASO Executive Directors (200 participants)
Public Forum, The Equitable (300 participants)
Funders Briefing, New York Life (100 participants)

Highlights

Our visits to eight ASOs in three of the five boroughs of New York City and in Newark brought Federal attention to areas of the city that have been traditionally overlooked. As a result, programs in those communities received the recognition they deserve. These visits occasioned considerable interaction among ASOs that do no often have the opportunity to interact.

New York clearly continues to stagger under the impact of HIV/AIDS on the residents of that city. However, community-based programs are aggressively working to meet the needs of those residents and are benefiting from increased Federal resources, especially under the Ryan White CARE Act.

The meeting with ASO executive directors was very productive and focused on ways in which community-based organizations and Federal agencies can work to respond to the very real needs of this city.

The more general forum served as a release valve for a very frustrated community. There were strong expressions of anger about the inability of even increased resources to keep up with the rising demand for services.
The meeting with ASO executives raised similar issues but allowed for a greater exchange of information and ideas. ASOs were concerned by the increased competition for funds and the inability of some organizations in outer boroughs of New York City to compete for those funds. There were strong indications of increased cooperation and collaboration among organizations.

Briefings:
Public Forum, Miami Science Museum (300 participants)
Funders' Briefing, Dade Community AIDS Foundation (20 participants)

Highlights

The visit to Miami and Fort Lauderdale was extremely productive and positive. There was strong praise for the recent increase in Ryan White CARE Act funding for the City of Miami.

Both Miami and Ft. Lauderdale are coping with a rising demand for services but a very different demographic picture. Miami (Dade County) faces several additional challenges including multi-lingual populations, rising use of intravenous drugs, and a growing list of individuals and families seeking housing. Ft. Lauderdale (Broward County) is also coping with the dual epidemics of HIV and drug abuse. There are multi-cultural responses to HIV in both communities that aggressively reach out to communities of color.

A central challenge in Miami is providing care to women; resources for that population are rising but not as quickly as the numbers affected. During the public forum there were very strong expressions of concern about the rising level of negative public debate.

The meeting with the South Florida Media Coalition was particularly beneficial. The Coalition was formed to highlight the impact of HIV/AIDS on the state and local community and the response of local residents and organizations. Our meeting resulted in extensive local media coverage.

Briefings:
Public Forum, Lyceum Theater (200 participants)
Funders Briefing, San Diego Community Foundation (30 participants)

Highlights

San Diego faces many challenges in meeting the needs of its HIV-affected population. Multi-lingual programs are essential to meet the needs of this population. A considerable concern is meeting the needs of adolescents and young adults, especially young gay teens. Our visit to the San Diego Youth and Community Teen Theater exhibited the strength of community-based programs using peer education and modeling and dramatic demonstrations. A visit with HIV-infected members of the armed services was particularly poignant, coming on the heels of the repeal of the Dornan Amendment, which would have required the discharge of such individuals. Service members were grateful for this action but quite nervous about subsequent efforts. They are also exasperated by the restrictions imposed upon their service, in particular, the prohibition against overseas deployment. Since such service is important to receiving promotions, these service members are frustrated in their career advancement.

Briefings:

- Funders Briefing, Levi Strauss Foundation (75 participants)

Highlights

With considerable input from local members of the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS, the San Francisco public forum was enlarged to include five breakout sessions on prevention, research, drug development, housing, and care.

A brief protest disrupted the opening session but participants reported that they had useful discussions with Federal officials and PAC members on key issues of concern.

The meeting was convened shortly after FDA's approval of the second and third protease inhibitors and there was considerable concern regarding the ability of uninsured and underinsured individuals to obtain access to such treatments.

Audience members urged an expansion of the AIDS Drug Assistance Program (ADAP). Other major concerns included: a lack of affordable housing and lengthy waiting lists for HOPWA-supported housing; a desire for greater focus on the needs of gay/bisexual men, especially young men of color; the need for greater research into alternative and complementary medicines; support for needle/syringe exchange programs; and, a need for greater resources to meet the growing demand for services among women and communities of color.

- Project VIDA

Briefings:
Public Forum, American Dental Association (100 participants)
Funders Briefing, Marshall Field's (100 participants)

Highlights

We visited a remarkable program on the South Side of Chicago that is stretching a small budget quite far. One reason for this is that it is the only ASO in that part of the city. This fact was communicated directly to representatives of the City's Health Commissioner who had joined us on our visit.

The South Side Help Center conducts peer counseling education of adolescents and young adults including teen mothers. It also provides AIDS education in the local housing projects.

Project VIDA is another peer counseling program aimed at young Hispanic men and women. During the funders' briefing, concerns were raised about the state of Illinois' plans to reduce the number of drugs covered by its ADAP program in order to pay for coverage of one protease inhibitor. The issue was also raised with the Editorial Board of the Chicago Tribune, which later editorialized that the state should add new funding to the program rather than cutting back on existing coverage.

Briefings:

Highlights

There was a tremendous community response to the visit of Secretary Shalala, who is a Cleveland native. Major issues raised included the cost of the new protease inhibitors, the impact of the epidemic on women and youth, syringe exchange programs, and the use of Ryan White CARE Act funds for funerals.

Cleveland had only recently become a Ryan White Title I grantee but had previously received assistance from the state through its Title II grant.
The visit to Stopping AIDS is My Mission provided an excellent example of peer education by young people ranging in age from 8 to 17.

Kamana Place offers residents transitional housing that prevents homelessness and connects people to a continuum of care.

The visit to MetroHealth Medical Center provided an additional opportunity for people living with AIDS to discuss their experiences and ask questions of federal officials.

Highlights

Having visited Los Angeles earlier in 1995, we wanted to pay particular attention to the delivery of HIV Services and prevention messages to communities of color.

AltaMed HIV Services has compiled an impressive record of serving communities of color in Los Angeles. Key issues raised by AltaMed clients included difficulties in qualifying for SSI and SSDI benefits. ONAP is working with the Social Security Administration and AltaMed to address those issues.

The LA Free Clinic demonstrated its peer counseling program featuring dramatic presentations by high school students.

The public forum included a demonstration by the AIDS Healthcare Foundation, which focused on the reduction in Title I funding to Los Angeles for FY 1997. That issue was raised with the LA County Board of Supervisors, which indicated that the shortfall in Federal funds had been replaced with local funds.

Other issues included the need for more focus on gay youth and women, support for syringe exchange programs, and the growing demand for Services in communities of color.

Highlights

This trip featured AIDS Services in rural communities. There is an impressive level of community support for AIDS prevention and care. Key issues included transportation, AIDS education in schools, stigmatization, access to SSI and SSDI, and Services to women.

There is a shortage of housing facilities for people living with HIV/AIDS. The County Health Commission is working to create satellite offices to care for people in isolated communities.

Participants in the town meetings indicated that the visit provided a rare opportunity for members of the community to interact with each other and to bring their concerns to the attention of Federal and state officials.
